HIDDEN GLORY

a man picked up a stone one day while walking beside a stream he looked at it then threw it away it chipped and lo! a gleam he took it home and studied it and saw to his surprise that beauty lay beneath its crust it was indeed a prize when cut through with a diamond saw a picture did unfold of hills and dales red sunset too a glory to behold so whenever you see an ugly stone don't pass it by with scorn it may contain a treasure trove just waiting to be born
